

Investors United For Success on MySpace.com

It's a marriage made in heaven. Investors United, America's first and finest school for real estate investors has been making friends since 1980. And now Investors United has its own page on the wildly popular MySpace.com web site—a site that calls itself “A place for friends.”

And just as Investors United is a real estate investors' phenomenon, MySpace.com is an interactive global phenomenon, a social networking website of over 300 million accounts offering a user-submitted menu of friends, personal profiles, blogs, groups, photos, music and videos.

It is the world's sixth most popular English-language website, and the third most popular website in the United States. And it's bound to become even more popular, because “A place for friends” is now a place where you can see your friends and make new friends at Investors United School of Real Estate.

Not into MySpace.com yet? Give it a try. Sign up on MySpace.com and register as a friend on the Investors United page. You'll find it's a great place to open doors to new experiences, to share interests, to communicate with friends old and new, to network with the world, possibly to discover profitable real estate investing opportunities, and to spread the word about the greatest real estate investing school on earth, Investors United.

Come see us and register at MySpace.com/InvestorsUnited. And let us know what you think.
