IAN PARRISH NAMED TO BOARD FOR JEREMIAH HOUSING

BALTIMORE, MD – May 15, 2008 – Ian Parrish, president of Investors United School of Real Estate, has been named to the Board of Directors for Jeremiah Housing, Inc., a local non-profit that provides quality, affordable housing and services to the elderly.

“Ian’s real estate expertise and community service make him an invaluable resource for us,” notes Carolyn Peoples, founder and chief executive officer of Jeremiah Housing. “We look forward to having Ian help us fulfill our mission to improve the quality of life for Baltimore’s neediest residents.”

Since 1999, Jeremiah Housing has provided a variety of services to meet the housing and healthcare needs of older adults with disabilities or moderate incomes. The non-profit renovates housing in carefully selected neighborhoods, then makes the homes available to elderly families.

According to Peoples, Jeremiah Housing’s philosophy is to develop and enhance a sense of community through partnerships with businesses, government agencies, and other non-profit organizations. More information can be found at www.jeremiahhousing.org.
